Introduction:

This is a lovely paddle with plenty of easy rock gardening between Tindall's & Army Bay when there is no significant swell.

This paddle is sheltered from any southerly wind. There is sometimes a small surf at Army Bay or Red Beach when there is a northerly swell.

Hazards:

- Surf Landings Ensure that participants have necessary skills, or choose a sheltered landing spot and/or land one at a time to give assistance as required.
- When rock gardening, wear a helmet if there is any swell.

Description:

Paddling from Red Beach you can amble your way along the northern shore line of the Whangaparaoa Peninsula, passing Stanmore Bay, Tindalls Beach to Army Bay.

There are plenty of opportunities to stop for lunch.

Paddling slightly beyond Army Bay you can drop a line over at Wellington Rock and the surrounding reef.
